New Manager Covered Left Field for Utions During Post Sesson and Exlore Confidence of Fano-Choice Will Bellety AlL

Michael J. O'Nalli of Minooks, Pa. who played left field on the Utira baseball team during the recent season, was in the city this afternoon and at a conference with the directors of the Utica Pield Club signed a contract to be manager; of the Utica team next season. This announcement will be received with the greatest estimatetion by the large majority of the fans of the city for they have the greatest confidence in his abilily to lead the learn successfully. In fact since the announcement of Manager Carr's going to Kansas City was announced there has been such a strong sentiment in fever of the acquisition of O'Noll that petitions were about to be circulated requesting the local directors to take such action.

While local fans hold O'Neill in high regard because of his earnest work in behalf of the team during the past season, none was in such good position-to judge of the value of those services so well so were the members of the Uties Field Club. Hence it was that as soon as it became evident that a new manager would have to be secured for Boxt season their attention was promptly directed to "Mike" O'Neill. Negotiations were opened with him and at the request of the local officials he came to

BIADS IN THE SIBLE.

The Scriptural Aliusiana to Haturei

The habits of birds as compared with those of wild beasts cause the former to be more noticed in any country than the latter, but this rule seems not to obtain among the writers of ficripture. Mammals as used in sacrifice or fer food 100% bulk far more largely in their eyes than all other kind of creatures put together. Roughly speaking there are a hundred animals mentioned in the Bible, ranging from the and to the coral, from the lion to the louse, and of these, writes Canon. J. W. Horsley in The Treasury, thirtyeight are mammals, and the frequency of their mention and the evidence given of close attention to their habits show the relatica importance attached to them.

Apart from references to birds generally we have in Scripture only mention of the bitters, the fewl, the cormorast, the crans, the buckoo, the flows, the eagle, the rulture, the glode (or burnerd), the hawk, the heron, the lapwing, the night-jer, the coprey, the ostrick, the owl, the partridge, the peacock, the pelican, the pigeon, the quali, the raven, the sparrow, the atork, the swallow and the gwan-Yet there are few lands, perhaps bone of the small size of Palestine, in which birds are more numerous and in greater variety, aspecially at some times of the year. This is largely from the fact that the fauna and flora of the sea coast and for some way inland are Mediterrentan in character.

Coming, however, to the Pelams, we find fowl or birds of the air only the dove, the sparrow, the swallow, the stork, the pellcan, the hawk, the raven and the eagle are mentioned. Fish are only mentioned once, in the summary of the plagues of Egypt, in Pealm ev., 11; "He turned their waters into blood, and slaw, their fieb." . The absence of Scriptural allusions to any Phillet Sending 144% 139% 132% 139% definite kind of fish to ramarkable, since the memory of the Nile and the takes and canals of Egypt, which teem with lish; the important fichery of the Lake of Gailes, the supplies from the Mediterranean to the fish market at Jernsale:n and the necessity to discriminate between rend and kind and to reject all that were without apparent scales of fine would have made the names of several kinds be expected. As Me. Hart says in ... "Scripture Natural History," the Greete have left us upward of 400 names for fishes.

but the Hebrews not one." Coming down to the lower ranks of creation, bees inevitably attracted attention as the provider of honey, mainly "wild" or gathered from the cliffe, but are made of clay tubes plied lute a prysmid. In Paulm xix., 16, the judgmente of the Lord are said to be "fiwester than boney and the droppings of honeycombe." and in Pasime laxxi., 17, the usual source of the supply is indicated. " with honey out of the rock would I satisfy three." in Pasima exix., 102, the image of sweetness recurs, "How sweet are Thy words unto my taste! yes, sweater than honey unto my mouth," In Pealme mil., ixviil., and zevil, there is a reference to the metting of wax before the fire, and only as a postical simils here and in Micah L, 4. is wax mentioned in the Bible. The word "bee," however, only comes in Posime exvill. 18, and in three out of the four times we find it in Scripture the imese is that drawn from the ennoyance of a swarm of angry bees attacking man, as here, "they came about me like bees."

Scalls, as would be expected by any conchologist who found from a geological map that a great part of the Holy Land belonged to the chalk and limestone formation, abound in many parts. We found one beautifully marked carriety of a common helix in multitudes on the bill shore Nazareth, and others whiten the detect even with their number, becoming whitet and with thickes shells where the heat to greatest. The only reference, however, in the Psaiter is to the stime left by the small and still more by the slag, as It crowls, which gives the appearance of wastng of substance. Bo in Pealms lvill., 6: (Let them be) like a mail melting, as it goeth along." Locusta could not fall to impress any dweller in the East, and so in Pasime

Bark Wearers of Bernse. There are no more singular people known then the Puncan tribe of Borned. Most of what has been learned about them is from hearsny, W. H. Beach ways that they are represented as dressing themselves in bark clothing, wandering about in the forests and sleeping in trees. They have nd houses and no property except mere personal poaressions which they exchange by butter. They have the habit of leaping three or tope yards at a time and thele apeed to said to be marrelone. They kill game with a weapon resembling a blowpipe, and ty the usual method of blowing aut the arrows with the breath, but by striking
