Work Is Started on Subsistence Gardens

70 Applications Made by Families On Relief List of Town

Subsistence garden officials of the Town of Kirkland have received about 70 applications for plots this year, it is announced by John E. Pryor, Kirkland, head of the movement in Oneida County. The town's representative is William Smith, also of Kirkland, who is supervising the distribution and planting of seeds.

A plot for local gardeners is situated at the corner of Mulberry and Chestnut streets, while there are three in Clark Mills in addition to the numerous individual back-yard gardens assigned to applicants. The individual spaces, staked out this week, are 50 by 100 feet, giving ample space to plant the 19 varieties of seeds, three varieties of plants, and three bushels of potatoes which are given to each applicant.

Plowing of all gardens has already been completed which permits the planting of seeds in time for seasonal harvest. Among the plants and seeds to be grown are: lettuce, radishes, onions, beets, potatoes, peppers, cucumbers, tomatoes and sweet corn, all of which may be planted in each individual plot. These are furnished free to welfare clients to whom spaces have been assigned.

Each applicant for space is required to sign the garden agreement which calls for planting according to the prescribed diagram. He agrees to cultivate and keep the plot free from weeds, and not to sell in the open market any of the produce grown. He must also agree to return in good condition each and every tool loaned for use, in addition to keeping a record of the harvest.
